Taxing industry

General Durbin Ward, of Ohio, is an intelligent man, thought by many members of his own party to be worthy of a seat in the United States Senate. It his recent speech at Gation, after he had talked about "cardinal principles," and the common right of mankind to use stimulants, he buckled down to the tariff and planted himself squarely on the free tradeplatform. He told his audience that the protective principle "taxes the farmer, mechanic, workman on the implements of his industry, on every article of clothing and comfort of home, not barely to support the gov ernment but to enrich the manufacturer."

Mr. Mongredien, the official writer for the Cobden Club, a choice selection of whose ingenious pamphlets lies before us, arguing in the same way, estimates that the tariff compels American farmers to pay four hundred millions of dollars a year as an overcharge on all the manufactured goods they consume-almost equal to the value of the whole wheat crop of 1880-an average of $100 to each farm, and cariously enough just equal to the average value of the farm implements in use on each farm in 1880. How long could the farmers stand this drain? From 1860 to 1880 the value of farms increased 212 per cent. No statement is more frequently made by free traders than that the duty is added to the cost of production and is paid by the consumer. The fallacy of this statement is easily shown. Judge Kelly, in 1878, made the House smile at the absurdity of the thing. He took the principal agricultural products for 1877 and, following the free trade theory, showed that consumers had been forced to pay two hundred and fiftysix millions of dollars to protect the bloated agriculturalist. The single item of wheat will illustrate the reasoning: Bushels pro-duced, 360,000,000; bushels exported, 57, 043,936; bushels consumed at home, 302,-956,064, on which there was a duty of 20 cents a bushel; gross imposition on home consumers, $60,591,212. Yet the price of the wheat consumed at home was fixed by the price of American wheat in England, admitted without duty.

There is searcely a manufactured article that is not cheaper now than it was in 1860, before this "robber tariff" was put on. Under protection the farmer buys more with his bushel of wheat than he bought under free trade; so with his pound of wool and his wife's pound of butter. It is the lament of English manufacturer has to grind his workman and accept less profit than he thinks he ought to have for the very reason that he cannot make the American consumer come to his terms while the American manufacturer stands between.

The InterLigence and manufacturer stands between.

The InterLigence and manufacturer stands between.

The InterLigence and a standard paper, the Register of Angust 23d and 24th. This musical lark that soarts so high promises to discuss in a broad and philanthropic spirit, to deny no truth, and acknowledge spirit, to deny no truth, and ack There is scarcely a manufactured artimanufacturer who said to Mr. Porter, of the New York Tribune, "We are obliged sell our goods in France for the same price as we did before they enacted their higher tariff, and the Bradford manufacturer is paying the duty, not the French consumers of the goods. I know from practical experience what I am talking about." This truth was perceived by Alexander Hamilton, who said, in his report of 1791, that the ultimate effect of tariff was to bring down price, and he showed why it was so. "The internal he showed why it was so. "The internal competition which takes place soon does away with everything like monopoly, and by degrees reduces the price of the article to the minimum of a reasoneble profit on the capital employed. This accords with the capital employed. This accords with the reason of the thing and with experiparty advocatas the protective principle, nd the Democratic party the revenue principle," Democratic stumpers and writers do a good deal of dodging, but Gen-do in the world and by what road they will try to achieve a career. To the young mar who has not seriously thought of this im portant matter, who is not fitting himself for anything in particular, we commend suggestion quietly thrown out by a gentleman who has succeded handsomly in his own line and so may be said to testify as

Mr. Jem Mace, whose name is known in two hemispheres, to say nothing of Australia, who entered upon his life work at eighteen years of age and who now, at filty-two, is "strong as a lion," declares that he has made two or three fortunes at his business, and this, as he says, "is doing pretty well." To do this required very close attention to business and the knack of taking hard knocks, but then labor is the price of success, and it isnot every man who can make so much so one fortune. But Mr Mace laments that the industry is not what it once was, because "the men are not so good as they were twenty years ago, matches are interfered with and backers are scarce," but he looks for a revival. Capital is slow to employ poor workmen, and there is rarely a lively demand for an indifferent product. It only remains for the young men not coming on the stage of affairs to fit themselves for this profitable work, and Mr. Mace, out of the fullness of his experience suggests the way to go about it. It is not every young man who is fit to engage in the business in which Mr. Mace has won distraction, but given certain natural qualifications the other things needful come by cultivation. "A man must be strong-minded," says Mr. Mace, "vary confident, perfectly well and healthy, take good care of himself and let whisky alone. And he must study the business to be a tip-top one. He must mix science and health." In his own ca-trophies innumerable of gold and silver, and these are readily converted into the circulating medium. In this day of overstocked learned pro sions, of lawyers, physicians and preach ers not earning their salt, it is worth while to consider so comparatively easy a road to fortune and fame. The colleges can assist greatly if they will. Many of them already pay great attention to physical development, but not one has yet established 81 60 Chair of Practical Pugilsm. Doctors Disagree.

As a reporter for the Pitisburgh Commercial Gazete sat (yesterday afternoon) in a chamber at No. 52.1 Federal street, Allegheny, listening to a torrible tale of suffering as it fell from the lips of a genile little lady, Mrs. Milo Ingram, the daughter of Capi. Hugh McKelvey, of this city, it seemed almost too much to believe, if the evidence had not been close at hand to substantiate every word. It was but another evidence of the culpable ignorance of a large class of practitioners of medicine who claimed for six years that her terrible disease was cancer. She was covered with u'cers, given up to die. Perma cured her perfectly. Continued on age 24, in "Ilis of Life," by Dr. Hartman, sk your druggist for one.

sunday while reading the Bible under the large pines east of the mine about half a mile, becoming absorbed in thought, unconsciously dropped the holy book from his hand in such a way that it fell over a precipice about flity feet high. Descending into the canyon to recover it, Mr. White found it lying upward, open at the Gospel of St. Matthew, chapter VII., while a large piece of rich quarts, which had been discloded by its fall, lay on top, tearing a jagged hole in the seventh verse, so familiar to all Christians: "ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." Accepting this as a good omen, Mr. White searched, and, in but a few moments, succeeded in locating the ledge, which was over two feet in width, and ussays $225, on an average, to the ton. Butter Making.

It was once a belief that the butter globale was enveloped in a membranous sac, and that churning was the mechanical action of breaking open these sacs and thus enabling the fats to unite. The chief argument was that sour cream churned quicker than sweet, so the sacs must be destroyed by the acid; but Dr. Henry Stewart affirms in The Dairy that acid does not dissolve caseine, but rather hardens it, as in the case of a cheese made of very sour curl.
Another theory was that sour cream made Another theory was that sour cream made more butter than sweet, but Professor Muncey has proven by most painstaking experiments with all kinds of cream, and at all ages, from very sweet to very sour, hat sweet cream makes just as muo more or less than sour cream, and last y it is even now claimed that sour cream outter keeps longest, but his experiment o to show that well washed sweet crean utter, kept alongside of as perfectly made our cream butter as he could make, was
